MAX THE FRIENDLY HOUSE COW!

I hope my toy chicken is adopted
with me...

The magnificent Max is unfortunately still waiting for his forever home. Maxi has been my buddy and favourite boy for almost two years, and this entire time he's been waiting so patiently for his forever home. Max has come such a long way over the last few years, he is braver, more comfortable and much happier than he was when he first arrived at the shelter with his long since adopted buddy Creed. Although he's happy, a rescue dog's life improves by an insurmountable measure when they finally find a family and get to experience the life that all dogs deserve.

Max's timid nature captured my heart from our first walk and his rambunctious antics have kept me occupied ever since. He may be big and strong and a bit reactive to other dogs, but if myself (a 21 year old girl) can handle him I'm sure there is some fabulous person out there who is up for the challenge of getting to know our well loved 'house cow'.

Max responds really well to gentle encouragement, positive reinforcement and management strategies when he comes across another dog on walks. He is also halt trained which may make the prospect of walking a 38kg dog less daunting for some. Although, when possible he prefers to walk without it as the big boy runs out of energy fast and needs to pant.

Maxibon comes with his quirks but he has the absolute loveliest nature and will make you giggle all day every day! All he would need to be the best behaved boy would be one medium-long walk a day or two short walks and a bit of a play (tug with soft toys is his game of choice). He would love to have a family with kids over twelve and lots of love and attention, although he is fine being left by himself for part time hours. Upon your arrival home he will show you just how much he missed you with a big bouncy greeting.

I wait in hope that the perfect family is just around the corner for Max as he is so deserving of his happy ever after.
